Tagless (GNA) – Printing ink series T200 and T120/basic inks

T200 and T120 are solvent based ink systems. As such they will not contain surfactants/tensides like Alkyl phenol ethoxylates (APEO). Most of the APEO's are Nonyl phenol ethoxylates (NPEO) and/or Octyl phenol ethoxylates (OPEO). As mentioned above we do not expect APEO to be present in our inks (< 100 ppm).

AZOS: A.M. Ramp & Co GmbH/RUCO Druckfarben – RUCO – does not use any dyes and/or pigments which will release aromatic amines by reductive cleavage (REACH regulation annex XVII, entry 43). Nevertheless, T200M1 and T200M2 as well as T120M1 do contain pigments which may hold small amounts of primary aromatic amines (about 20 ppm).

Formaldehyde: The basic ink shades of T200 and T120 do not contain formaldehyde. Therefore, we do not expect formaldehyde to be present in the inks.

Cadmium, Lead, Mercury: T200 and T120 are organically based inks. So, we do not expect the named elements/heavy metals to be present in the inks.

Tin Screening for Organotins: We do not expect tin organic compounds to be present in the inks.

Phthalates: For many years RUCO does not use any phthalate plasticizers in its inks.

PVC (poly vinyl chloride): The above mentioned ink series do not contain PVC (CAS: 9002-86-2).

We hope we could be helpful with this information.

Kind regards
